

Simulation and Social Theory

Sean Cubitt

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction: The Long Term	1
Section 1: Theories
1 Values, Signs and Subjects	7
(i) Commodities	7
(ii) Semiotics, structuralism and signification	10
(iii) Psychoanalysis: Freud, surrealism and Lacan	12
2 Technology, Information and Reason	16
(i) Canadians in the global village	16
(ii) Information and efficiency	21
(iii) The retreat from utopia	25
3 The Poetics of Pessimism	29
(i) Guy Debord: dialectics and spectacle	29
(ii) Jean Baudrillard: simulation and seduction	41
(iii) Paul Virilio: speed and transappearance	54
(iv) Umberto Eco: irony and hyperreality	65
(v) The televisualisation of the world	76
4 Making Sense of Simulation	80
(i) Hyperrealism: the art and practice of simulation	80
(ii) Mediation: democracy and the politics of interpretation	86
(iii) Residual realities: globalisation and the limits of postmodernisation	92
Section 2: Cases	99
5 Disney World Culture	99
6 War in the Persian Gulf	114
7 Working with Computers	128
Conclusion
8 Pessimism of the Intellect, Optimism of the Will	143
Annotated Bibliography of Further Reading	153
References	159
Index	169