

JAMES DEARNLEY
JOHN FEATHER

the wired world

an introduction to the theory and practice of the information society

Contents

Preface vii

- 1 Theorizing the information society 1
 - Introduction 1
 - Understanding information 5
 - The information society 11
 - A note on further reading 19
 - Notes and references 19

- 2 A new technology for information 25
 - Introduction 25
 - Computers 28
 - Networks 29
 - A new age? 33
 - A note on further reading 39
 - Notes and references 39

- 3 The flow of information 43
 - Introduction 43
 - The old and the new 44
 - The internet and the world wide web 46
 - The dilemma of quality 51
 - A note on further reading 57
 - Notes and references 57

4	Information policy	60
	Using information in the information society	60
	information policy: an introduction	64
	Conclusion	85
	A note on further reading	86
	Notes and references	86
5	The information society in practice: the European experience	94
	introduction	94
	Moving to a model Europe?	96
	The rationale for a European information society policy	98
	First steps towards a European information society	104
	Europe's road to an inclusive information society	106
	implementing the information society in Europe	111
	Moving forwards: the eEurope Action Plan	118
	European organizations and institutions	121
	Measuring the information society in Europe	122
	Conclusion	124
	A note on further reading	125
	Notes and references	125
6	The future	131
	introduction	131
	Convergence and cross-over	132
	The consequences of change	140
	Creating change	142
	The implications of change	145
	Theory and practice	147
	Notes and references	150
	Some suggestions for further reading	154
	Bibliography	157
	Websites	169
	Index	175