

CORRECTION

A Positive Approach to Language Mistakes

MARK BARTRAM

RICHARD WALTON

CONTENTS

How To Use This Book	vi
Introduction	1
1. Background Theory	4
What is language? Why do people learn second languages? What is a teacher? How do we learn a second language? Three reasons for encouraging mistakes.
2. What is a mistake?	20
What is a mistake? What is a serious mistake?
3. Teacher and student behaviour	26
The problems of the heavy corrector. The problems of the non-corrector. The psychology of correction.
4. Oral mistakes – priorities	32
Fluency and accuracy. Short-term considerations for class management of mistakes. Covert mistakes.
5. Managing oral mistakes – techniques	41
Class techniques. Repeating in context and echoing. Reformulation. Automatic correction. Increased and hidden input. Mistakes during freer activities. 2-phase reformulation.
6. Written English – preparing and checking	64
Differences between speaking and writing. Lack of preparation. Testing. Training for checking.
7. Managing written mistakes	78
The red pen syndrome. Reacting to content. Restrictive correcting. Involving students. Active mistake management. Correcting codes. Group work in large classes. Reformulation. Correcting in examination classes.
8. Remedial work	94
Revisiting language. Changing the approach.
9. Advice for the non-native speaker	99
The special situation of the non-native. Developing a tolerant attitude to mistakes. Complaints. Teaching more than language.
10. Conclusion	109
11. Correcting Tasks	112
Commentary	119