PART 7 READINGS FOR WRITERS 555

Strategies for Reading 557

First Reading 557 • Second Reading 557

Emily Prager, Our Barbies, Ourselves 558

Description 561

Lansing Lamont, The Bomb 561

The world's first atomic bomb was a "bloated black squid girdled with cables and leech-like detonators."

Carl Rowan, Unforgettable Miss Bessie 563

A noted columnist celebrates the life of a teacher who was "a blessing to children and an asset to the nation."

Narration 567

Lucy Grealy, Truth and Beauty 567

Disfigured by cancer, a young girl makes a game of catching people staring at her.

Maya Angelou, Champion of the World 569

For African Americans in the segregated South, Joe Louis was more than a prize fighter. He was a symbol of hope and change.

Example 572

Anna Quindlen, Homeless 572

A homeless woman living in New York's Port Authority terminal represents an increasing urban problem of poverty and loss.

Tony Brown, Death of a Dream 575

The failure of a black-owned supermarket symbolizes the self-defeating "boycott by Blacks of their own businesses."

Definition 578

Janice Castro, Spanglish 578

Castro offers a colorful definition of a new language emerging from the blend of Spanish and English.

Isaac Asimov, What Is Intelligence? 581

A famous scientist questions the way we define intelligence.

Comparison and Contrast 583

Rachel Carson, A Fable for Tomorrow 583

An environmentalist creates a haunting before and after comparison of a town polluted by pesticides.

Azadeh Moaveni, Maman and America 585

An Iranian American explains her mother's love/hate relationship with the United States.
