DISCUSSION-BASED ONLINE TEACHING TO ENHANCE STUDENT LEARNING

Theory, Practice and Assessment

TISHA BENDER

CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS xiii

INTRODUCTION xv

PART I THEORETICAL IMPLICATIONS: BUILDING A BODY OF ONLINE PEDAGOGY

1. THE DISTANCE FACTOR 3
   Can the Mind Exist Independently from the Body? 3
   Differentiating between Space and Place 4
   Distinguishing between Physical Distance and Transactional Distance 5
   How the Social Dimension Impacts on Transactional Distance 7

2. THE OPTIMAL ROLE OF THE ONLINE TEACHER 10
   Who Do We Teach? 10
   The Importance of Personalizing Education 11
   Student Characteristics 12

3. RETHINKING LEARNING THEORY WITHIN THE ONLINE CLASS 16
   Hierarchy of Thoughts and Acquisition of Knowledge 16
   Benjamin Bloom's Taxonomy 17
   Paying Attention 19
   The Role of Long-Term Memory and Prior Knowledge 20
   Self-Regulating and Reinforcing Long-Term Memory 21
   Application of Learning Theories to the Online Environment 22
   Can Technology Give Access to Previously Inaccessible Information? 23
   Learning How to Use the Technology 24
   Translating Concepts from the Real World to the Virtual World 24
   The Significance of Active Learning on Knowledge Acquisition 29
   The Importance of Awareness of Student Needs and Differing Abilities 30
   Factors that Work against Knowledge Acquisition and Feeling of Community 31
   The Impact of Nonlinear Learning 32

PART II PRACTICAL APPLICATIONS

4. COURSE DESIGN 37
Customizing the Class 37
Biographical Statement and Syllabus 37
Posting an Introductory Lecture 38
Posting a First Discussion Forum 39
Posting an Announcement 39
Signposts 39
Arrangement of Lecture Material 42
The Online Lecture Format 43

5. STARTING TO TEACH THE ONLINE CLASS 45
Anxiety 45
Means of Engagement 47
The Benefits of Contacting Each Student Individually at the Start of the Semester 47
Designing an Informal First Discussion Topic 47
Asking Students to Discuss Relevant Experiences in Their Personal Introductions 48
Completing a Sentence 48
Students Interview and Introduce Each Other 48
Providing a Hook 49
Visualization Techniques 49
Playing a Game 49
Asking Students What They Hope to Learn from the Course 50
Asking Students to Write Short Descriptive Stories about Themselves 50
Establishing the Right Tone 53

6. ASPECTS OF ONLINE COMMUNICATION 56
How to Facilitate and Stimulate Online Discussion 56
Clearly Define Your Expectations for Discussion 57
Employ the Socratic Method 61
Some Obstacles to Participation in Online Discussion 66
Suggestions for Overcoming Lack of Participation 68
Circumvent Problems before They Occur 69
Ask the Right Questions 69
Consider the Layout of Responses 72
Be Encouraging to Students Who Remain Quiet 74
How Do We Speak Online? 75
Style of Online Writing 75
Scope for Misinterpretation 79
Gender Differences 82
Racial Differences 85
How We Show We Are Listening and Caring Online 88
Who Cares? Listening and Caring 88

September 11, 2001 95
Pedagogical Loneliness 99
Overcoming Problematic Situations 101
Heated Online Discussions 101
The Late Student 104
Academic Integrity 109
Suggestions as to How to Avoid Feeling Overwhelmed 114

7. INNOVATIVE ONLINE TEACHING TECHNIQUES 118
Group Work 119
Optimal Group Size 119
Implications of the Instructor Seeing each Group Discussion 119
Group Work in Large Classes, Case Studies and Collaborative Problem Solving 120
Assigning Groups 121
Individual Student Roles within Their Group 121
The Instructor's Contribution to Group Discussion 122
The Nonparticipating Student 122
Group Presentations 123
Other Forms of Group Work 123
Role-playing 123
A Writing Game 127
Holding a Debate 127
Synchronous Online Tools 128
Suggested Uses of Synchronous Online Tools 128
Faculty Reactions to Synchronous Online Conversations 131
Student Reactions to Synchronous Online Conversations 132
Ground Rules Concerning Conversation Patterns and Flows 133
Should Attendance in the Online Chat Be Mandatory? 134
Online Guest Lecturers 135
The Online Guest Makes a Scheduled Synchronous Appearance 135
The Online Guest Spends a Week in the Class, Responding Asynchronously 136
Virtual Field Trips 136
Integration of Web Sites 137
Guidelines for Students Doing Web Research 138
Student Presentations of Their Discovered Web Sites 139
Student Portfolios 139
Use of Portfolios in Online Workshops 139
Comparison of a Master Class with an Online Workshop 140
Journals 142
Online Team Teaching 143
Advantages of Team Teaching 143
Potential Problems of Team Teaching 144
An Intriguing Use of the Team Teaching Concept 146
Handling an Interruption or Unexpected Change of Direction 146

Team Teaching the Hybrid Class 147
Grading 147
Online Testing and Grading 147
Knowing a Student's Real Identity 148
Grading the Electronic Essay/Take-Home Exam 148
Grading for Quality of Responses in Online Discussion 149
Grading Group Work 150
Grading Synchronous Online Conversations 150
Grading Online Multiple-Choice Quizzes 151

PART III ASSESSMENT

8. OPINIONS ABOUT ONLINE TEACHING AND LEARNING 157
Online Education versus Correspondence Courses 157
Caring about Students You Never Meet 158
Exerting Quality Control Online 158
Overwhelming Aspects of Incorporating Technology 159
Learning to Meaningfully Apply Technology in Education 159
One Size Does Not Fit All 160
Hidden Costs 160
Online Teaching Is Time-Consuming 162
The Value of Being Physically Present 163
Advantages of Freedom and Flexibility 163
Richer, More Reflective Discussion 163
Informality as an Online Asset 164
High Satisfaction Levels of Online Students and Faculty 164

9. BUILDING A MODEL OF ASSESSMENT OF ONLINE EDUCATION 166
Factors to Be Considered when Performing Assessments 168
Emotional Reactions 168
Are All Students Suited to Online Learning? 168
Can Meaningful Comparisons Be Made between Campus and Online Classes? 170
Impact of the Technology 171
Other Possible Frustrations of Online Students 171
Is Online Education Suitable for All Instructors? 172
Pragmatic Considerations of Accurately Performing Assessments 173
Transference of Knowledge and Skills 174
A Criteria-Referenced Study: Assessment as a Measure of Achievement of Course Goals and Learning Outcomes 174
Technological Stability 184
Concluding Comments about Assessment of Online Education 185
Learning as a Social Process, Impacted by Long-Term Memory 185
The Assessment Triangle 185

The Value of Small-Scale Assessments 187
The Impact on Analytical Skills and Knowledge Acquisition 187
Preconceived Ideas about Innate Ability 188
Transference of Acquired Knowledge 189
Additional Skills Acquired as an Online Learner 189
The Need for Frequent Formative Assessments and Student Feedback 190
Feedback from Peers 191

AFTERWORD 193

GLOSSARY 195

REFERENCES 197

INDEX 204

ONLINE ROLE-PLAYS
Sample role-plays available at http://www.styluspub.com/resources/discussionbasedonlineteaching.aspx