

negotiating licences for digital resources

FIONA DURRANT

Contents

Acknowledgements ix

Introduction xi

Who is this book for?	xi
What is negotiation?	xii
Why negotiate?	xiv
The aim of this book	xvii
Complementary skills	xvii

1 Preparation 1

What are the organization's needs?	1
A new subscription	3
Renewing a subscription	5
Understanding a product and how the organization intends to use it	12
Tender requirements	26
Agents	28
Quotes from the publisher	29
Budgetary issues	31

MFP (Most Favoured Position), WAP (Walk Away Position) and BATNA (Best Alternative to a Negotiated Agreement)	32
Summary	34
References	35
2 The contract	37
The aims of the contract	38
The contract as a key part of the preparation process	38
Who should read the contract?	39
Key sections of the contract	40
Standard contracts	57
Summary	58
References	59
3 Negotiation	61
The method of communication	62
Bi-party, consortium and multi-party negotiations	64
The publisher and their products	68
The relationship between publisher and purchaser	69
Being assertive	72
Negotiating the price	73
The language of negotiation	74
Dealing with emotions	78
E-mail communications	79
Meetings	88
Internal negotiations	103
Areas for negotiation other than price	105
David and Goliath – coping with the powerful	113
What if they refuse to negotiate?	115
Summary	117
References	117

4 Staff development and communicating negotiation outcome 119

Staff development 119

Statistics 121

Disseminating the results of negotiations 124

Recording the outcome of the negotiation 125

Summary 126

Reference 126

5 Conclusion 127

Reference 129

References and further reading 131

Books 131

Websites 131

Appendix 1 Frequently asked questions 133Appendix 2 Negotiation timeline 139

Contract length 139

Cancellation terms 139

Human resources 140

Other renewals 140

Budgetary data 140

Busy times of the year 141

Nice-to-do 141

Appendix 3 Personal negotiation experience 143

Successful arguments or tactics 143

Unsuccessful arguments or tactics 144

Index 145