

The background of the cover features a close-up of a person's hand. The thumb and index finger are holding a thin needle. In the upper right, a circular brass scale hangs from a string, containing several small, reddish-brown seeds. The palm of the hand is spread out, displaying a variety of dried botanical ingredients: a dark, textured root-like piece on the left; a circular, cross-sectioned slice of a root with a radial pattern; a pile of bright red, fibrous material; a bundle of thin, green, needle-like leaves; and a single, light-colored, oval-shaped seed or fruit on the right. A black mouse cursor arrow points towards the bottom right corner of the text box.

A GUIDE TO
CHINESE MEDICINE
ON THE INTERNET

KA WAI FAN

CONTENTS

Introduction	1
Chinese Medicine As Complementary and Alternative Medicine (CAM)	2
How to Evaluate Web sites Related to Chinese Medicine	9
The Basic Terms of Chinese Medicine	12
Classification of Web sites on Chinese Medicine	20
Assumptions	22
 Chapter 1. Portals and General Web Sites	 27
General Chinese Culture	28
Traditional Chinese Medicine	30
Acupuncture	54
Herbal	61
Taiji and Chinese Massage	71
Digital Museums	72
 Chapter 2. Organizations	 75
Chinese Medicine, Traditional Medicine, and Oriental Medicine	75
Acupuncture	97
Herbal	108
Qigong and Related Fields	115
CAM or Related Organizations	119
 Chapter 3. Libraries	 125
Universities	127
Organizations	128
 Chapter 4. Schools	 139
Greater China (China, Taiwan, Hong Kong, and Macau)	141
North America (United States and Canada)	145
Europe and Australia	151

Chapter 5. Journals	155
General	155
Acupuncture	167
Herbal	172
Qigong and Related Sites	175
CAM Journals	178
Newsletters	187
History and Philosophy	195
 Chapter 6. Databases, Bibliographies, and Electronic Texts	 199
Databases	200
Journals and Articles	227
Bibliographies	240
 Chapter 7. History and Philosophy	 251
 Index	 269