

Teaching Information Literacy Online

Edited by THOMAS P. MACKEY and TRUDI E. JACOBSON

List of Figures, Tables, and Appendixes	ix
Foreword	xi
Terry Anderson
Preface	xv
Trends in Online Learning	xvi
Information Literacy Online	xvii
Book Organization	xviii
Online Learning at Your Institution	xx
Acknowledgments	xxiii
Part I: Blended and Hybrid Learning	1
Section Introduction	1
1. Shakespeare Is Not a One-Shot Deal: An Open Wiki Model for the Humanities	5
John Venecek and Katheryn Giglio
Introduction	5
Recent Literature	7
Information Literacy at the University of Central Florida	9
Interdisciplinary Perspective	10
Collaboration in the Humanities	11
Project Overview	12
Program Planning	14
Learning Outcomes	15
Assessment of Online Learning	17
Text and Image	19
Conclusion	21
2. Reusable Learning Objects: Developing Online Information Literacy Instruction through Collaborative Design	25
Matthew C. Sylvain, Kari Mofford, Elizabeth Lehr, and Jeannette E. Riley
Introduction	25
Related Literature	26
Institutional Context	27

Interdisciplinary Context	28
Discussion of Faculty–Librarian Collaboration	30
Program Planning	33
Online Learning Model	36
Impact on Student Learning	37
Assessment of Online Learning	39
Conclusion	42
3. Framing Multiliteracies: A Blended and Holistic Approach to Digital Technology Education	47
Andrew Whitworth, Ian Fishwick, and Steve McIndoe
Introduction	47
Related Literature	47
The Institutional Context of the University of Manchester	50
Disciplinary Perspective	52
Discussion of Faculty and Librarian Collaboration	53
Program Planning	55
Online Learning Model	55
Impact on Student Learning	57
Assessment of Online Learning	59
Conclusion	62
4. Finding Your Fate: The Evolution of a Librarian–Faculty Collaboration to Bring History Online	65
Kristina DuRocher and Lisa Nichols
Introduction	65
Related Literature	66
Institutional Context at Morehead State University	68
Disciplinary and Interdisciplinary Perspective	68
Discussion of Faculty–Librarian Collaboration	69
Challenges of the Online Collaboration	73
Program Planning	76
Online Learning Model	77
Impact on Student Learning	78
Assessment of Online Learning	81
Conclusion	83
Part II: Open and Online Learning	87
Section Introduction	87
5. Supported Open Learning: Developing an Integrated Information Literacy Strategy Online	91
Clarissa Gosling and Ingrid Nix
Introduction	91
Related Literature	92

Institutional Context	93
Disciplinary Perspective	94
Discussion of Faculty–Librarian Collaboration	95
Program Planning	96
Online Learning Model	99
Impact on Student Learning	101
Assessment of Online Learning	103
Conclusion	106
 6. Information-Literate Avatars: Resource-Based Learning in Second Life	109
Jenna Kammer and Tracey Thompson
Introduction	109
Related Literature	111
Institutional Context	113
Interdisciplinary Perspective	115
Faculty–Librarian Collaboration	115
Project Planning	116
Resource-Based Learning in a Blended Environment	120
Impact on Student Learning	123
Assessment of Online Learning	125
Conclusion	126
 7. Information Literacy by Design: Recalibrating Graduate Professional Asynchronous Online Programs	133
David Lavoie, Andrew Rosman, and Shikha Sharma
Introduction	133
Related Literature	134
Institutional Context	137
RELM: An Interdisciplinary Model for Instructional Design	139
Program Planning	140
Conceptual Underpinnings of RELM	140
Instructional Design Process Resulting from RELM	142
Librarian Role in Information Literacy	143
Impact on Student Learning: Example of Model Applied to Two Courses	146
Assessment of Online Learning	150
Conclusion	152
 8. Working Outside the Org Chart: A Faculty–Librarian Partnership to Design an Online Graduate Course	159
Susan M. Frey and Rebecca L Fiedler
Introduction	159
Related Literature	160
Institutional Context at Indiana State University	162
Interdisciplinary Perspectives	163
Faculty–Librarian Collaboration	164

viii Teaching Information Literacy Online

Course Planning and Online Learning Model	165
Assessment of Online Learning	168
Conclusion	169
Afterword	173
About the Editors and Contributors	175
Index	181