

CONTENTS

List of Figures and Tables	viii
About the Authors	xi
Publisher's Acknowledgements	xii
About the Companion Website	xvii
Introduction	xviii
1 Health and Health Promotion	1
Introduction	1
Health as a contested concept	1
Health: a working model	7
Promoting health: competing ideologies	10
Public health, health promotion and health education	47
Key points	54
2 Assessing Health and its Determinants	55
Introduction	55
Epidemiological perspectives	56
The need for alternative perspectives	72
Determinants of health	83
Inequality and social exclusion	96
The contribution to programme planning	109
Key points	110
3 The Determinants of Health Actions	112
Introduction	112
The adoption of innovations in social systems	113
Change at the individual level – influences on individual health intentions	117
Empowerment: a critical review of the dynamics	132
Translating intention into practice: removing barriers and empowering communities	144
Implications for programme planning	155
Key points	156
4 Health Promotion Planning – A Systematic Approach	157
Introduction	157
Horizontal and vertical programmes	158

Planning models	160
Health promotion planning – reflections	176
Quality health promotion	189
Alliances and partnerships for health	197
Health promotion planning	208
Key points	209

5 Information Needs 211

Introduction	211
Health needs assessment	212
Community profiles	236
Solution generation	242
Information and health promotion planning	255
Key points	256

6 Healthy Public Policy 257

Introduction	257
Healthy public policy – the WHO position	258
Healthy public policy – meanings and scope	262
Developing policy – from rhetoric to reality	271
Policy-making	285
Advocacy	290
Adoption and implementation	298
Health impact assessment	300
Healthy public policy, health promotion and health education	309
Key points	310

7 Education for Health 311

Introduction	311
The communication process	312
Health education and learning	318
Facilitating learning	327
Persuasion and attitude change	348
Critical health education – strategies for social and political change	358
The primacy of education	369
Key points	370

8 Mass Communication 372

Introduction	372
Mass communication and health promotion	373

Mass media – capabilities and functions	374
Mass media in practice	391
Social marketing and health promotion	394
Advocacy for healthy public policy – the role of mass media	402
Mass media and health promotion	412
Key points	412
9 Working with Communities	414
Introduction	414
Working with communities: definitions and concepts	415
Good practice in community health promotion	432
Community health projects: examples	439
Challenges and dilemmas	441
Devising community programmes for development and social action	445
Key points	450
10 Settings for Health	452
Introduction	452
The settings for health approach	453
The health-promoting prison	468
Other settings for health	472
The settings approach – future potential	473
Key points	475
11 Evaluation	477
Introduction	478
Why evaluate?	478
Values and evaluation	479
Evaluation and programme design	482
Paradigm wars – positivism and its alternatives	483
Effectiveness, efficiency and efficacy	492
Disentangling complexity – selecting indicators of success	495
Reliability, validity and the RCT	502
A new gold standard – the judicial principle	510
Evidence-based health promotion	515
Key points	534
Bibliography	536
Index	596