

Detailed Contents

About the Authors	xvi
Preface	xvii
How Is This Edition Different?	xviii
What Have We Learned?	xix
Acknowledgments	xx
1. Overview of Focus Groups	i
The Focus Group Is a Special Type of Group	2
The Story Behind Focus Group Interviews	2
Why Do Focus Groups Work?	4
Characteristics of Focus Groups	6
Focus Groups Involve People	6
The People Possess Certain Characteristics	6
Focus Groups Provide Qualitative Data	7
Focus Groups Have a Focused Discussion	7
The Uses of Focus Groups	7
Focus Groups Can Help With Decision Making	8
Focus Groups Can Guide Program, Policy, or Service Development	8
Focus Groups Can Help Capture Insights on Behavior	11
Focus Groups Can Provide Insight on Organizational Concerns and Issues	11
Customer Satisfaction	12
Organizational Development	12
Understanding Employee Concerns	12
Planning and Goal Setting	12
Needs Assessment	13
Quality Movements	13
Policy Making and Testing	13
How Focus Groups Can Be Used With Other Research Methods	14
Criticisms of Focus Groups	14
Focus Group Participants Tend to Intellectualize	14
Focus Groups Don't Tap Into Emotions	15

Focus Group Participants May Make Up Answers	15
Focus Groups Produce Trivial Results	16
Dominant Individuals Can Influence Results	16
You Can't Depend on the Results of Focus Group Research	16
Summary	16

Planning the Focus Group Study

Determining the Purpose	20
Deciding Whether Focus Group Interviewing Is the Right Method	21
When to Use Focus Group Interviews	21
When Not to Use Focus Group Interviews	22
Determining What Types of People Can Give You the Information You Want	23
Determining How Many Groups to Conduct	23
Balancing the Design With the Resources Available	26
Designing the Focus Group Study	27
Single-Category Design	27
Multiple-Category Design	28
Double-Layer Design	29
Broad-Involvement Design	29
Large-Scale Design	30
Implementing in Phases	31
Planning With Analysis in Mind	32
Listening to Your Target Audience	33
Considering Consent, Human Subjects, and Ethics	34
Developing a Written Plan and Determining Resources Needed	35
Anticipating Problems	36
Summary	37

Developing a Questioning Route

Qualities of Good Questions and a Good Questioning Route	41
Evoke Conversation	41
Use Words the Participants Would Use When Talking About the Issue	42
Are Easy to Say	42
Are Clear	42
Are Short	42
Are Usually Open-Ended	43
Are One-Dimensional	43
Include Clear, Well-Thought-Out Directions	43
A Good Questioning Route	43
Categories of Questions	44
Opening Question	44
Introductory Questions	45

Transition Questions	45
Key Questions	45
Ending Questions	46
Strategies That Evoke Conversation	47
Begin the Conversation Before the Focus Group Begins	47
Have a Pocketful of Conversational Questions	48
Use a Checklist for Conversational Questions	48
Use Strategies to Encourage Conversation	49
Tell Them You Would Like a Discussion	49
Pause and Look at Participants	49
Questions That Engage Participants	49
Listing Things	49
Rating Items	50
Choosing Among Alternatives: Pilot-Testing Ideas	53
Picture Sorting	53
Drawing a Picture	54
Drawing a Diagram or Flow Chart	55
Mind Mapping	55
Using Your Imagination	56
Developing a Campaign	57
Doing Something Before the Focus Group	58
Listening to the Brain or the Heart	58
The Process We Use to Develop a Questioning Route	60
Step 1. Brainstorm	61
Step 2. Sequence the Questions	61
Key Questions First, Then Work Backwards	61
General Questions Before Specific Questions	61
Positive Questions Before Negative Questions	62
Uncued Questions Before Cued Questions	63
Group Insights Before Expert
Research, Then Group Reflection	63
Step 3. Phrase Questions	64
Use Open-Ended Questions	64
Ask Participants to Think Back	65
Avoid Asking Why	66
Keep Questions Simple	66
Make Questions Sound Conversational	67
Be Cautious About Giving Examples	67
Step 4. Estimate Time for Each Question	68
Step 5. Get Feedback From Others	69
Step 6. Revise the Questions	69
Step 7. Test the Questions	69
Changing Questions: The Importance of Consistency	70
Circumstances When Questions Might Change	70

Summary	71
Appendix 3.1 Example of Questions to Understand an Issue	72
Appendix 3.2 Example of Questions for Pilot-Testing Materials	73
Appendix 3.3 Example of Questions for Evaluating Services	75
Participants in a Focus Group
The Purpose Drives the Study	79
Sampling Procedures for Focus Groups	80
The Composition of the Group	81
The Size of a Focus Group	82
Strategies for Finding Participants	83
Lists	83
Nominations	83
Snowball Sample	84
Piggyback Focus Groups	84
Focus Groups on Location	84
Screening and Selection Services	85
Random Telephone Screening	85
Organizational Recruiting	85
Ads or Announcements in Newspapers and on Bulletin Boards	87
Selecting Participants	88
Step 1. Set Exact Specifications: The Screens	88
Step 2. Carefully Design the Recruiting Process	88
Step 3. Generate a Pool of Names of Potential Participants	89
Step 4. Randomize Names in the Pool to Reduce Bias	89
No Selection Process Is Perfect	90
Recruiting Strategies	90
1. Think Through and Practice the Invitation	90
2. Set the Meeting Date, Time, and Location	91
3. Make Personal Contacts With Potential Participants	92
4. Send a Personalized Confirmation Letter	93
5. Make a Reminder Phone Contact	93
Incentives to Participate	93
Money as an Incentive	95
Nonmonetary Incentives	95
Unique Recruiting Advantages of Public and Nonprofit Organizations	97
Summary	98
Appendix 4.1 Telephone Screening Questionnaire	99
Appendix 4.2 Confirmation Letter	101
5. Moderating Skills	103
What's Needed When Planning	103
Selecting the Right Moderator	103
The Right Moderator Respects the Participants and Shows It	104
The Right Moderator Understands the Purpose of the Study and the Topic	104

The Right Moderator Communicates Clearly	105
The Right Moderator Is Open and Not Defensive	105
The Right Moderator Is the One Who Can Get the Most Useful Information	106
Using a Moderating Team	107
What's Needed Just Before the Group	108
Mental Preparation	108
Presession Strategy	109
Snacks and Meals	111
People Who Haven't Been Invited	111
What's Needed During the Group	112
Capturing the Group Discussion	112
Beginning the Focus Group Discussion	117
Welcome	118
Overview of the Topic	118
Ground Rules	118
Opening Question	118
Anticipating the Flow of the Discussion	119
Giving License to Expressing Differing Points of View	120
Two Essential Techniques: The Pause and the Probe	120
Experts, Dominant Talkers, Shy Participants, and Ramblers	121
Responding to Participant Comments	122
Head Nodding	122
Short Verbal Responses	123
Humor	123
Incorrect or Harmful Advice	123
Responding to Participants' Questions	124
Questions Before the Focus Group Begins	124
Questions After the Introduction	124
Questions During the Focus Group	125
Questions at the Conclusion of the Group	125
How to Answer Participant Questions	126
Be Ready for the Unexpected	127
Nobody Shows Up	127
Only a Few Attend	127
The Meeting Place Is Inadequate	127
The Group Doesn't Want to Talk	127
The Group Gets So Involved That They Don't Want to Leave	127
Hazardous Weather Occurs Just Hours Before the Meeting	128
The Early Questions Take Too Much Time, Leaving Little Time for the Final Questions	128
Concluding the Focus Group	128
Summary	128

Appendix 5.1 Checklist for Focus Group Interviews	130
Appendix 5.2 Responsibilities of Assistant Moderators	132
Appendix 5.3 Example of a Focus Group Consent Form	134

Analyzing Focus Group Results

The Purpose Drives Analysis	138
Understanding Analysis	139
Analysis Is Systematic	139
Analysis Is Verifiable	140
Analysis Is Sequential	140
Analysis Is Continuous	141
How Focus Group Analysis Is Different	141
The Analysis Process	143
1. Decide Who Will Coordinate the Analysis	143
2. Look Over Your Questions, and Specifically Think About Analysis	144
3. Anticipate the Discussion	144
4. Use Multiple Strategies for Data Capture	145
5. Work With the Note Taker to Ensure the Right Data Are Captured	145
6. Some Analytic Tasks Occur During the Focus Group	145
7. Debrief Soon After Group	146
8. List, File, Copy, and Document All Materials	146
9. Decision: Should You Transcribe?	146
10. Begin the Coding Process	147
11. Prioritizing the Analytic Themes	147
12. Write the Report	148
Forms of Data	148
Transcript Based	149
Abridged Transcript	149
Note Based	149
Memory Based	150
Preparing Focus Group Transcripts	150
The Classic Analysis Strategy	151
Analyzing Via Computer	155
Analysis With Transcripts	155
Analytic Frameworks	156
Some Tips to Consider	156
Know What Is Needed in Your Environment	158
Being There Is Best	158
Not Everything Is Worthy of Analysis	158
Much Analysis Is Based on Pattern Identification	159
Sometimes Pattern Identification Might Not Be Appropriate	159

Beware of Personal Bias and Preexisting Opinions About the Topic	159
You Are the Voice of the Participants	159
Visually Represent the Findings	160
Be Cautious With Numbers	160
Be Careful Interpreting Body Language	160
Should It Be Analyzed as a Conversation or an Interview?	161
Summary	161
7. Reporting	163
Five Principles of Reporting	163
1. Know the Point, and Get to It Quickly	163
2. Clear, Effective Writing Takes Time	163
3. Provide Enlightenment	164
4. Involve End Users Throughout the Study	164
5. Use Multiple Reporting Strategies	164
Written Reports	164
Study Popular Writing	164
Realistically Assess Your Own Ability	165
Give Yourself an Early Deadline	165
Create an Environment That Supports Your Writing	165
Let Yourself Write a Crummy First Draft, Then Edit, Edit, Edit	165
Dazzle With Your Ideas—Not With Fancy Words	166
Make the Report Visually Attractive	166
Use the Cousin Test	166
Types of Written Reports	167
Narrative Report	167
Top-Line Report	168
Bulleted Report	169
Thank You Report Letter to Participants	169
Oral Reports	169
Allow Time for Questions	170
Cite the Most Important Things First	170
Be Careful of Ho-Hum Syndrome	170
Limit Your Points	170
Use Visuals and Quotes	171
Tell Your Audience What You Want Them to Do	171
Select the Right Reporter	171
Summary	172
8. Styles of Focus Group Research	175
Market Research Approach	175
Academic Research Approach	177
Public–Nonprofit Approach	179
Participatory Approach	181
Summary	184

9. Focus Group Interviewing With Young People	187
Get the Right Moderator!	188
Keep Age Range Within Two Years	188
Avoid Close Friends and Kids Who Hang Out Together	188
Get Them Talking to Each Other	189
Ask Age-Appropriate Questions	189
Be Aware of Age-Related Behaviors	190
Shorten the Time of the Group	191
Use Food	191
Find a Friendly Location	191
Get Permission	191
Hang Loose	192
Summary	192
10. International and Cross-Cultural Focus Group Interviewing	195
Ethnic or Minority Racial Groups	195
Sample Carefully	196
Get the Right Moderator	196
Ask for Advice	197
Work With Local Groups and Organizations	197
Be Aware of Recent Events and History	197
Consider Using Rituals	197
Select Respectful and Appropriate Foods	198
Ask People to Speak for Themselves	198
International Groups and Organizations	198
You Are an Outsider—You Need the Help of Insiders	198
Get Permission and Authorization to Conduct the Study	199
Organize the Focus Group So It Seems Natural to the Community	199
Discourage Onlookers	200
Be Thoughtful About Advanced Preparation	201
Use a Local Team	201
Use the Local Language	202
Be Less Concerned About Time	202
Provide Adequate Confidentiality	202
Provide Benefit to Participants	202
Summary	203
11. Telephone and Internet Focus Group Interviewing	205
Focus Groups on the Telephone	205
The Sequence of the Telephone Focus Group	207
Before the Telephone Focus Group	207
During the Telephone Focus Group	207
Following the Telephone Focus Group	208
Questions in the Telephone Focus Group	209
Special Moderator Skills for the Telephone	210

Focus Groups on the Internet	211
The Chat Room Focus Group	211
The Bulletin Board Focus Group	212
Technology	213
Environment	214
Participants	214
Moderating	215
Managing the Bulletin Board Focus Group	216
Developing Questions for a Bulletin Board Focus Group	216
Incentives in Telephone or Internet Focus Groups	219
Summary	220
12. Focus Group Interviewing Within the Organization	223
Control the Sampling Strategy	224
Avoid Power Differentials	224
Avoid Pre-Established Small Groups	224
Be Aware of the Environment and Recent History	224
Select the Right Moderator	225
Provide Adequate Confidentiality	226
Consider the Appropriateness of Focus Groups	226
Provide a Benefit to Participants	227
Do a Reality Check After Each Group	227
Analyze With Group Dynamics in Mind	227
Summary	228
13. Modifications of Focus Groups	231
Periodically Repeated Focus Groups	232
Two Moderators	232
Media "Focus Groups"	233
Issues When Adapting Focus Groups	234
Summary	234
14. Answering Questions About the Quality of Focus Group Research	237
Frequently Asked Questions	239
Is This Scientific Research?	239
Background	240
Thoughts	240
How Do You Know Your Findings
Aren't Just Your Subjective Opinions?	240
Background	240
Thoughts	241
Isn't This Soft Research?	241
Background	242
How Do You Determine Validity?	242

Background 242

Thoughts 243

Can You Generalize? 247

Background 245

Thoughts 244

Why Don't You Use Random Sampling? 244

Thoughts 245

How Big Is the Sample, or How Can You Make

Those Statements With Such a Small Sample? 245

Background 245

Thoughts 245

References 246

Author Index 248

Subject Index 249