

CONTENTS

Illustrations	ix
Schedules	xiii
Acknowledgments	xv
Introduction: Television Broadcasting	1
0.1 Return of the Content–Promotion Hybrid	3
0.2 Viewers and Their Networks of Friends	4
0.3 Television Endorsements and the Call-to-Affiliation	8
0.4 Studying Promotion, Paratexts, and “Total Merchandising”	12
0.5 Chapter Summaries	19
1 Broadcasting Series and Sponsors	32
1.1 Branding the Modern Family: 1950s and Now	32
1.2 Sponsored Credit Sequences	35
1.3 Dramatized Advertisements	38
1.4 Danny Thomas, Dodge, and Ethnic Strivers	39
1.5 Star Sitcoms: Lucy, Desi, and Danny . . . and MacMurray?	42
1.6 The Nelsons as America’s Favorite Endorsers	49
1.7 Showcasing Consumer Aspirations	54
1.8 Buying and Being American from the Andersons to the Goldbergs	61
1.9 Suburban Strivers, Modern Family , and The Middle	65
1.10 Re-contextualizing Sponsored Sitcoms of the 1950s	71

2	Narrowcasting Schedules and Stars	86
2.1	Narrowcast Broadcasting	86
2.2	Showtime's "Bleak Comedy" Schedule Pairs	87
2.3	From Premium to Broadcast Channel Brands	92
2.4	ABC as Middlecaster	95
2.5	Ozzie &amp; Harriet and the Peer-ent	97
2.6	The Rock 'n' Roll Era Arrives on ABC	100
2.7	My Three Sons and the Generational Accord Sitcom Cycle	106
2.8	Wally, Ward, and Eddie Haskell on Leave It to Beaver	110
2.9	From Bobby Soxer to Beach Bunny on Donna Reed	114
2.10	Rock 'n' Roll (& Lose Control) on Patty Duke and Gidget	117
2.11	That Kind of Girl on That Girl and Bewitched	123
2.12	ABC's Thursday's Girls Schedule Promotions	127
2.13	Family Fridays and Tween Tuesdays	132
2.14	ABC's Mid-1970s Ratings Dominance	134
2.15	From TGIF to Disney Channel's Friendship Economy	138
3	Cable Brandcasting and Disney Channel's Company Voice	149
3.1	Disney Channel as Brandcaster	149
3.2	Disney Channel: A Premium/Basic Cable Hybrid	152
3.3	Brandcasting Through Myth Stories	156
3.4	The Obstinate Optimist and "In-Betweeners" Content	159
3.5	Brandcasters and Boutique Content-about-Content Firms	162
3.6	Disney's Sunny Outlook on Stardom: YouTube to Hollywood	165
3.7	Brand Managing Themselves: Miley Cyrus and The Jonas Brothers	169
3.8	From BFF Sitcoms to Disney's Friends for Change	172
3.9	Friends for Change Music Videos	178
3.10	Purchaser Citizens and Parent Company Sustainability	181
4	Disney Studios' Brand Management on TV and Blu-ray/DVD	191
4.1	Parent Company Brandcasting	191
4.2	Disney Brand Management Films? Saving Mr. Banks and Frozen	193
4.3	Authorizing Walt Disney	199
4.4	Interpretive Frames on Blu-ray/DVD	200

4.5	Hosted Lead-ins and Studio History as Creative Nonfiction	206
4.6	Coca-Cola and Custom Character-Based Commercials	211
4.7	Television “Trailerizing” and The Parent Trap	214
4.8	Disney Channel’s Decision Engines	223
4.9	Disney Parks on Modern Family and The Middle	228
Epilogue: Twitter Multitasking, Mad -vertising, and Sustainable TV		245
E.1	Disney Re-Micks	245
E.2	Complementary Storytelling: The Influence of the Lost Model	249
E.3	Must-Tweet TV: # Pretty Little Liars	253
E.4	From “ Mad -vertising” Mad Men to Mad Predictions	259
Index		269