

CONTENTS

Contributors	xi
Acknowledgements	xvii
Introduction	xix
Amy Skinner, Matt Baillie Smith, Eleanor Brown and Tobias Troll
PART 1
Rethinking education and development	1
1 A new development paradigm or business as usual? Exploring the relationship between the political subject and social change April R. Biccum	3
2 Development as systematic learning and capacity building Michael Karlberg and Bitá Correa	19
3 Learning, labour and leisure Rachel Shah	36
4 Practitioner perspective: learning for life Helena Norberg-Hodge	50

PART 2
Education and development alternatives	59
5 Ethno-development, education and development in Raqaypampa, Bolivia Pablo Regalsky and Hanne Haaland	61
6 Can dreams come true? Exploring transformative education and development through the experiences of La Verneda-Sant Martí, Catalunya, Spain Sandra Roig and Jim Crowther	77
7 What do we mean by success? Comparing outcomes from Freirean adult education programmes in Brazil and Mozambique Rolf Straubhaar	93
8 Practitioner perspective: this revolution will not be schooled: how we are collectively improvising a ‘new story’ about learning Manish Jain and Bayo Akomolafe	106
PART 3
Learning, agency and citizen engagement	123
9 Civic habitus : toward a pedagogy for citizen engagement Jethro Pettit	125
10 The future of development education: transformational learning for a world citizens movement Tobias Troll and Johannes Krause	143
11 Learning in the praxis of diaspora politics: understanding development as social justice Helen Underhill	158
12 Practitioner perspective: the critical and creative promise of education: a trans-local approach to hosting learning spaces Anita Borkar	172

Conclusion: disrupting development and education	179
Amy Skinner, Matt Baillie Smith, Eleanor Brown and Tobias Troll

Index	183
--------------	-----