Conclusions 136

1. Seacology's twin goals of environmental protection and social justice provide a balanced focus. 136
2. Leadership that combines the skills of a visionary founder with the talents of an experienced executive director solves a typical "founder's syndrome." 136
3. Commitment to working locally with indigenous staff and avoiding government bureaucracies eliminates bureaucratic complexities that often plague start-up organizations. 137
4. Working through small communities and creating local incentives provides a solution to the classic problem of collective action. 137

5. The challenge of sustainability is addressed through developing ongoing philanthropic support by combining stimulating travel experiences with a donor program. 137
6. Seacology has maintained a strong single-minded focus on mission. 137
7. Seacology is beginning to address the long-term challenge of future monitoring and enforcement. 137
