

1999
Highsmith Award
Winner

Assessing Service Quality

Satisfying the Expectations of Library Customers

Peter Hernon

Ellen Altman

Contents

Figures	ix
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii

1 Understanding Ends and Means 1

Service Quality	2
Patrons, Users, Clients, or Customers?	3
The Library Customer Is Still the Customer	6
Customer Satisfaction and Service Quality	7
Service Quality—Perception Is Reality	8
Why Assess Quality?	9
Other Dimensions of Service Quality	10
The Payoff for the Library	13
Summary	14

2 A Look in the Library Mirror 18

Self-Sufficiency	19
Peculiarities of Placement	21
Signage	22
Staff	22
Reducing “Dumb” Questions	23
Frustration	23
Summary	24

3 "Your Mission, Should You Choose to Accept It . . ." 27

Access and Assistance	30
A Mission Is More Than Good Intentions	31
Philosophy and Values	34
The Library as a System	34
Customer Service Plans	36
Library Service Plans	37
Summary	43

4 Measuring and Assessing the Components of Service Quality 46

What to Measure	48
How to Measure	51
Who Decides What Is Important?	55
The Q Words: Quantity and Quality	55
Relating "What" to Measure with "How" to Measure	58
Compared to What?	60
Using the Information about "What" and "How"	62
A Question of Balance	65
Qualitative Analysis: The Missing Portion of the Picture	66
What Now?	66
Summary	68

5 What Can Go Wrong with Numbers 72

Do More Resources Mean Better Service?	73
Rankings Can Be Not Only Misleading but Also Dangerous	73
Some Statistics Become Double-Edged Swords	74
All Activities Are Not Equal	75
Counting the Same Items Twice Inflates and Misleads	75
Are All These Really Apples?	75
New Options and Technologies Must Be Included	76
Summary	76

6 Compliment and Complaint Management 79

What Is a Complaint?	80
Why People Do Not Complain	81
Attitude and Actions	86

Establishing a Compliment and Complaint Tracking System	86
Continuous Improvement	96
Summary	97

7 Listening to Customers through Surveys 100

Measuring Customer Expectations	101
A Form and Process Tailored to Library Needs	107
How to Proceed	112
Customer-Related Measures	116
Developing the Survey Instrument	117
Distributing the Survey	123
Continuous Evaluation	124
Summary	124
Selected Sources on Research Methods	128

8 Listening to Customers through Focus Group Interviews 137

Case Studies	138
Focus Group Interviews	139
Lost and Never-Gained Customers	142
Internal Customers	143
Summary	144

9 Customer-Related Indicators and Requirements 147

Mining the Automated System	150
Privacy Issues	151
Tracking Trends	152
Capturing Virtual Visitors and Uses of Electronic Information	152
Customer-Related Indicators for Public Libraries	154
Customer-Related Indicators for Academic Libraries	164
Interpretation	174
Customer Requirements for Both Academic and Public Libraries	174
Summary	178

10 Satisfaction and Service Quality: Separate but Intertwined 180

What Is Satisfaction?	182
Ways to Measure Satisfaction	184
Examples	186
Recommendations	187
Customer-Related Measures	191
The Customer's Voice	192
Summary	192

11 Interpreting Findings to Improve Customer Service 195

Basic Concepts	197
Quadrant Analysis	198
Survey of Expectations	203
Focus Group Interviews	204
Interpreting Market Penetration	204
Loyalty and Intensity	205
Interpreting Customer Preferences	206
Communicating with Stakeholders	207
Summary	208

12 Embracing Change—Continuous Improvement 210

Competition	214
What Is Quality?	215
Going beyond “How Much?”	216
Staff Development and Training	221
Service	224
Summary—Time for Action, Not Excuses	225