

Linguistics for CLINICIANS

Maria Black

Shula Chiat

Contents

Acknowledgements	x
PART I INTRODUCTION	1
1 Guide to this book	3
1.1 For students	3
1.2 For teachers	7
2 Meaning and form in language processing	10
2.1 Introduction	10
2.2 Why we need to distinguish language function from language form and meaning	10
2.3 Giving form to meaning: words	16
2.4 Giving form to meaning: sentences	21
2.5 Meaning and form in language processing	23
PART II SYNTAX	27
3 Syntactic categories	29
3.1 What are syntactic categories?	29
3.2 Why do we need syntactic categories?	31
3.3 Syntactic category tests: introduction	37
3.4 Analytical tips	43
3.5 Links to other levels	45
4 Hierarchical structure	52
4.1 Introduction	52
4.2 Why do we need constituents?	53
4.3 Constituency tests: general	59
4.4 Types of constituent	64
4.5 Types of constituents and their internal structure	71
4.6 Analytical tips	75
4.7 Links to other levels	77

5	Representing structure	83
5.1	Brackets, trees and other devices	83
5.2	Why do we need diagrams?	87
5.3	Defining structural relations	88
5.4	The general structure of phrases	90
5.5	Analytical tips	97
5.6	Links to other levels	99
6	The syntactic shape of sentences	103
6.1	What is a sentence?	103
6.2	Why do we need to focus on verbs?	105
6.3	Verb subcategories	109
6.4	Links to other levels	117
PART III	SYNTAX – SEMANTIC LINKS: SITUATIONS	123
7	Shaping situations: making them dynamic or static	125
7.1	Introduction	125
7.2	What makes events and states different	127
7.3	Why we need the distinction	133
7.4	The event/state continuum	136
7.5	Analytical tips	138
8	Shaping situations: making the focus narrow or wide	142
8.1	Introduction	142
8.2	Narrow focus verbs	146
8.3	Wide focus verbs	160
8.4	Wide focus verbs that include ACT	163
8.5	Summary of situation types	167
8.6	Why we need these concepts	169
9	Shaping situations: selecting participants	175
9.1	Introduction	175
9.2	How to apply thematic role labels	175
9.3	How to tell complements and adjuncts	181
9.4	Why we need these concepts in the clinic	187
10	Shaping situations: foregrounding participants	193
10.1	Introduction	193
10.2	Subjects and objects in English	194
10.3	Where participants end up	197
10.4	Why we need these concepts	201
PART IV	SYNTAX – SEMANTIC LINKS: TIME AND MODALITY	205
11	The auxiliary system	207
11.1	Introduction	207
11.2	Why we need to look at tense and auxiliaries	208

11.3	The auxiliary system	209
11.4	The full picture	215
11.5	Auxiliaries and different sentence functions	216
11.6	Links to other levels	225
12	Tense and aspect	229
12.1	Introduction	229
12.2	Why look at time?	230
12.3	Past time	231
12.4	Present time	235
12.5	Future time	237
12.6	Links to other levels	239
13	Modality	242
13.1	Introduction	242
13.2	Why look at modality?	244
13.3	Modal meanings	245
13.4	Links to other levels	250
PART V	SYNTAX – PHONOLOGY LINKS	255
14	The phonological shape of sentences	257
14.1	Introduction	257
14.2	Why look at stress patterns?	259
14.3	What determines the stress pattern of a sentence?	262
14.4	More on the phonology of prepositions	266
14.5	More on the phonology of auxiliary verbs and the main verb be	268
14.6	The representation of stress patterns	268
14.7	Rhythmic alternation: the ‘dum-di-dum’ rhythm of language	269
14.8	Links to other levels	270
15	Conclusion	276
15.1	Where we got to	276
15.2	Where to go from here	277
	Keys to exercises	278
	Further reading	297
	References	301
	Index	309