The Society for Research into Higher Education

Towards Strategic Staff Development in Higher Education

edited by Richard Blackwell
and Paul Blackmore

Contents

List of contributors vii
List of abbreviations xi
Preface xii

Part I: Setting the scene 1
1 Rethinking strategic staff development 3
2 Academic roles and relationships 16
3 The challenge of lifelong learning 29
4 Promoting entrepreneurship in higher education 40

Part II: Extra-institutional influences 53
5 Disciplines and the development of a scholarship of teaching and learning 55
6 Developing the subject dimension to staff development 66
7 A new approach to professionalizing teaching and accrediting training: The Institute for Learning and Teaching in Higher Education 79
8 Just another initiative? Investors in People in higher education 91
9 Leadership and management development: an overview 104

Part III: Intra-institutional matters 117
10 Developing departments 119
11 Research and teaching: making the link 131
12 Embedding e-learning practices 142
13 Career development for research staff 154

Part IV: Case studies 167
14 Creating a local research culture 169
15 'The best hundred pounds': Learning Works in the University of Glasgow 180

16 Using a student-focused learning perspective to align academic development with institutional quality assurance 191

References 203
Index 223