

LIBRARY WEB SITES

Creating Online Collections and Services

A. Paula Wilson

Contents

Figures ix
Acknowledgments xi
Preface xiii

ONE Planning Your Web Site 1
Why Planning Is So Important 1
Site Development Process 2
Staffing Model 3
Library Planning Documents 6
Content Inventory 10
Style Guides and Standards 11
Housekeeping and “Other Duties as Required” 16

TWO Information Architecture 21
Site Navigation 22
Usability 29

THREE Internet Marketing: Promoting the Library 36
Branding and the Library Image 36
About the Library 37
Creating Sticky Content 41

FOUR Digital Reference Collections and Services 46
Digital Collections 47
E-mail and Chat Reference Service 48

Frequently Asked Reference Questions (FARQs)	52
Knowledge Bases	53
Web-Based Instruction	55
Obituary Indexes	60
Referral Services	61

FIVE Library Catalogs and Portals 63

A Look at the Competition	65
Customizing the Catalog	66
A Matter of Semantics: Labeling for Access	69
Content Enrichment	69
External Web Sites: Implications for the Library Web Site and Catalog	70
A Case Study	73

SIX Licensed Databases and Electronic Books 75

Research Databases and Electronic Journals	76
Electronic Books	86

SEVEN Reader Services 89

RA Web Sites Today	91
Leisure Reading in Academic Libraries	91
Visibility of RA	92
Links to External Sites	93
Reading Lists	93
Subscription Databases	95
Book Reviews	96
Authors Online: E-mail and Real-Time Chats	96
Responding to Readers	97
Book Discussion Groups	98
RA Web Sites Tomorrow	100

EIGHT Content for Specific Audiences 101

Diversifying Your Web Site	103
Young People	105

Seniors 109

Language-Related Groups 110

Accessibility: Services to People with Disabilities 113

NINE Library Web Sites: Where Do We Go from Here? 119

Administrative Issues 120

Technology 120

User-Centered Design 121

Full-Text Content 121

Third-Party Vendors 121

E-commerce 122

The Companion Web Pages 122

Appendix A: Editorial Calendar 123

Appendix B: Library Web Manager's Resource Directory 127

Bibliography 133

Index 141