

David Skopec

Digital Layout

for the Internet and other Media

Content

0.1.1	Layout – three perspectives	006
0.1.2	Layout and interface	008
0.1.3	Layout as a process	010

1.1.0	Scope of Idea	012	2.1.0	Scope of Action	070	3.1.0	Scope of Effect	116
1.1.1	Recognition	014	2.1.1	Formats	072	3.1.1	Mobile devices	118
1.1.2	Possibilities	016	2.1.2	Format typology	074	3.1.2	Desktop systems	120
1.1.3	Ideas	018	2.1.3	Content beyond the visible	076	3.1.3	Public terminals	122
1.1.4	Rhetoric	020	2.1.4	Layout beyond the visible	078	3.1.4	Large-size displays and projections	124
1.1.5	Design	022	2.1.5	Layout grids – seen relatively and absolutely	080
			2.1.6	Structured flexibility	082
			2.1.7	Layout grids – modularity and more	084

1.2.0	Elements and Objects	024	2.2.0	Structure and Organisation	086	3.2.0	Perception for the Layout	126
1.2.1	Elements of the dynamic layout	026	2.2.1	Topology	088	3.2.1	Perception – no accident	128
1.2.2	Typographical typology	028	2.2.2	Topology – the outside view	092	3.2.2	Hearing and feeling the layout	130
1.2.3	The typology of reading	030	2.2.3	Topology – the inside view	094	3.2.3	Seeing within the layout	132
1.2.4	Dots	032	2.2.4	Unconventional topologies (dare to disorder)	096	3.2.4	Perception – typography	134
1.2.5	Lines	034	2.2.5	Structure, contents and organisation	098	3.2.5	Perception – colour	136
1.2.6	Shapes	036	2.2.6	From order to variety	100	3.2.6	Perception – orientation	138
1.2.7	Colour	038				3.2.7	Accessibility	140
1.2.8	Photography	042
1.2.9	Illustration and animations	048
1.2.10	Icons	052
1.2.11	Functional elements	056

1.3.0	Montage	058	2.3.0	Collaboration	102	3.3.0	My Layout	142
1.3.1	Montage in the layout	060	2.3.1	Layout – the communication process	104	3.3.1	One layout – many faces	144
1.3.2	Vertical montage – figure-ground	062	2.3.2	Media on media	106	3.3.2	Skinning – personalising layout	146
1.3.3	Vertical montage – figure-figure	064	2.3.3	Cooperation interfaces – style guides	108	3.3.3	Personalising the contents	148
1.3.4	Horizontal montage – figure-ground-time	066	2.3.4	Digital kits	114	3.3.4	Implicit individualisations – the software helps	150
1.3.5	Visual gestures	068				3.3.5	No more layout?	152

0.2.1	Sources and bibliography	154
0.2.2	Acknowledgements	156
0.2.3	Index	158